LOCOMOTION IN PARIS. THE CAB AND CARRIAGE STREET. Take them as a class, and there cannot be found a better behaved or honester body of men in the public service.

LES VOITURES DE PLACE (STREET CARS).

The vehicles belonging to the Compagnie Générale des Voitures are numbered from 1 to 5,000. They are all of the same color—green, with a red thread line for ornament; and ianterns of four colors—blue, red, yellow and green. On the door is painted an escutcheon, you may be consisting of a varnished leather hat, drab pantaleons, a red waistcoat and dark blue frock, with breas buttons bearing the arms of the company.

The tariff of the voitures de place is not arbitrary. It is fixed by the city authorities. Every driver is bound by the regulations to band the passenger, on taking his scat, a bulletin specifying the fares. This bulletin is interesting, and is worth proserving. It contains, in addition to a statement of the fares and regulations, advertisements and other indications of great utility to travellers, and in the evept of complaints and reclamations its value become solvious, as it enables the administration at once to identify the driver whose conduct may be complained of. Each driver is also bound to have upon his person a copy of the police regulations relative to the service of the vehicles, and he must exhibit it to the passenger whenever called upon to do se.

In addition to its service of cabs on the public stands the Compagnie Générale des Voitures has a special service entitled that of the "Grande Remisse." It supplies vehicles of a superior class at rarses varying from $130 to $400 a month, it is organised in a manner to provide for the wants of medical practitioners, who require a vehicle daily up to twelve o'clock; for those of Bourse speculators who have need of a carriage for two or three hours in the middle of the day, for those of the advantages of a private carriage without any of the annoyances and anxieties which its keep entails.

On the 31st of December, 1875, this company possessed 6,834 vehicles and 9,187 horses. It manufactures its own c-rrages and harness and employs upward of 5,000 workmen. In its workshops, which cover a large extent of ground, all the latest and most perfect machinery is employed. The timost mitention is, in short, paid to the improvement of the materiel of the company, and similar vigilance is exercised in regard to its personnel. All complaints against drivers are investigated within the space of twenty-four hours, and they are subjected to the soverest duscipline. There is a bureau for the deposit of articles left by passengers in the vehicles of the company, and there can be no better evidence of the care with which the drivers are selected than the frequency with which articles thus mislaid are recovered. Take them as a class, and there cannot be found a better behaved or honester body of men in the public service.
